

Jimey Grant
Founder & Lead Writer
The Remnant Chronicles
Lafayette, LA
remnantchronicles.writer@gmail.com
(337) 372-6784

---

The Soldier, The Jesuit Priest, and the Provocateur

The Architecture of Indoctrination

Introduction

History is not a series of accidents, but a calculated deployment of systems designed to manage the human soul. This letter serves as an autopsy of the architecture of indoctrination, exposing how the partnership of religious organizations, the military, and the CIA—under the guise of democracy—was, and are currently, rebranding the original religion, culture, and identity of sovereign people and nations. This system replaces authentic heritage with global and state-sponsored propaganda via the Seven Mountain Mandate. I will also demonstrate how this strategy plays a definitive role in the New World Order agenda today.

---

Spiritual Subversion and the Weaponized Theology of the Soldier-Priest

To understand the modern global agenda, one must first study the original masters of the hostile takeover: the Jesuit priests of the Catholic Church. The road to their influence was paved with a series of "Corporate Charters" known as Papal Bulls, most notably Dum Diversas (1452) and Romanus Pontifex (1455). These decrees, issued by Pope Nicholas V, granted the Portuguese monarchy the perpetual right to "invade, search out, capture, vanquish, and subdue all Saracens and pagans" and to "reduce their persons to perpetual slavery." This was the official birth of the Doctrine of Discovery, a legal and spiritual framework that stripped sovereign nations of their rights by labeling them "enemies of Christ."

By the time the first official transatlantic shipments began in 1501 and accelerated into a direct industrial pipeline by 1518, the stage was set for a specialized enforcement arm to manage the human soul. Consequently, when the Jesuit Order was commissioned in 1540, these "Soldier-Priests" were deployed not as mere missionaries, but as tactical auditors of a global mandate already authorized by the highest seat of religious power.

This infiltration of West Africa was anchored by a weaponized theology that transformed the Bible into a manual for psychological shackling. To provide a "moral" source code for the industrial slave trade, the Jesuits popularized the "Curse of Ham" (Genesis 9:20–27), falsely claiming that African descent was a divine decree for perpetual servitude. This allowed them to frame the Middle Passage as a biblical mandate rather than a crime, using the Creator's name to justify the theft of sovereign identity. As Jesuit priests met slave ships at the docks, the immediate, mass administration of baptism served as a spiritual branding, effectively replacing ancestral names and lineages with European labels. By framing indigenous spiritualities as "pagan" or "satanic," they waged a psychological war that stripped the enslaved of their cultural umbilical cord. They understood that religion is the foundation of identity; by dismantling that foundation, they installed a programmed dependency and a subservient mindset that equated religious docility with social submission, finalizing a spiritual siege through the selective deployment of "Pro-Slavery Paulinism" and verses like Ephesians 6:5.

The Evolution of the Edict: From Papal Bulls to Political Propagandas

As historians Will and Ariel Durant observed, 'the past is the present unrolled for understanding,' and the theological branding of the 16th century was merely the first chapter in a perpetual cycle where the concentration of power simply shifts from the cathedral to the cabinet office. Today, the transition from historical indoctrination to modern control is bridged by the use of political and religious propaganda as a psychological weapon. In the current global landscape, Catholicism and Islam are frequently utilized as the two primary engines for religious propaganda, serving as binary poles that keep the masses in a state of perpetual 'religious war.' By framing geopolitical conflicts through the lens of 'Holy War' or 'Defenders of the Faith,' political architects manipulate the deepest layers of human identity. The ongoing theaters of conflict in the Middle East are not merely theological disputes; they are just functional examples of this global propaganda engine. This is not merely about spirituality; it's about using religious fervor to bypass the rational mind, ensuring that the 'public servant' remains a 'vain follower' of a narrative they did not write.

The Mountain of Media serves as a frontline theater for this psychological operation. It is one of the primary modes of operation within the Seven Mountain Mandate, a strategy conceived in 1975 to reclaim seven key spheres of societal influence: Religion, Family, Education, Government, Media, Arts/Entertainment, and Business. Its goal is the systematic installation of 'believers' at the summit of these 'mountains' to transform global culture from the top down. By controlling these mountains, these entities can broadcast a specific brand of religious-political propaganda that functions as a 24/7 indoctrination loop. It creates a culture where the news cycle and spiritual dogma are indistinguishable, reinforcing the same identity-stripping tactics used by the Jesuit missions but updated for the digital age

The implementation of these strategies is not limited to foreign soil; it is actively deployed domestically through the use of agent provocateurs. Agencies like the FBI and CIA have a documented history of using these "plants" to infiltrate religious and political movements, acting as catalysts for radicalization or chaos to justify further state or global objectives. By pushing these agendas on our own soil, the state ensures that the people are constantly distracted by manufactured internal "religious wars" and political propaganda. It is the ultimate evolution of the "Soldier-Priest" model: a systematic attempt to manage the population through fear, faith, and the calculated destruction of a unified cultural identity.

Conclusion: Reclaiming your Authentic Heritage

The Architecture of Indoctrination only succeeds when the people remain unaware of the blueprints. By exposing the multi-century "hostile takeover" of the sovereign soul—from the baptismal branding of the 1540s to the digital propaganda of the modern Media Mountain and religious politics, we strip the "Jesuit Priest" and the "Provocateur" of their power. To reject the programming and indoctrination of state and global-sponsored narratives is to reclaim your original identity and execute a total spiritual and mental detachment from the managed global agenda.